Clotilde Solier said, "Thanks to the experience I have acquired at Bouygues Construction, I have gained a thorough understanding of its business lines and teams, both in France and internationally. In my new role, I will draw on this experience in a position that works closely with operational teams, combining risk management, performance and business development support."

Aged 48, Clotilde has distinguished herself through her strong financial expertise and her diverse career path within the Group, which has seen her work on a variety of projects and in central functions across the Energies & Services, Buildings & Civil Works and Telecommunications sectors. Her career path is a striking example of the Group's ability to develop talent by offering its employees genuine career advancement.

As CFO of Bouygues Bâtiment France since 2021, she successfully consolidated the fundamentals of the risk management function and the quality of financial reporting, while driving performance through the increased use of data to support the business.
